Dear Readers,

Every year, more and more visitors pay a visit to Thailand. Just in 2017, there were over 35 million people come to the Land of Smiles. With 2,000 miles of coastline, 40,717 beautiful temples around the country, 2,000 years of rich history and culture, the diversity of wildlife, and some of the best hotels and resorts in the world, there's simply too much on offer in this tropical paradise. If you need more reasons to be convinced, let us tell you a lovely secret: Thailand is never cold and has plenty of sunshine regardless of the season. From the North to the South, its irresistible enticement is year-round.

Thailand currently has six international airports in Bangkok, Chiang Mai, Hat Yai, Krabi, Phuket and Koh Samui. But most of our customers as well as other travelers will start their journey from Bangkok first, then travel from there to other destinations in the country. That's the reason why the two airports in Bangkok (Suvarnabhumi and Don Mueang) are always busy. They handled 336,018 flights in 2016, and are major airline hubs with a total of more than 100 airlines from every part of the world (mostly in Suvarnabhumi Airport).

Plenty of airlines fly to Thailand with one or two stops en route. Some even have three stops. Just within the USA, there are about 30 airlines operating routes from US cities to Thailand, with different times and costs, which enough to confuse many first time visitors. In fact, we have received a lot of calls to ask about America - Thailand routes.

In order to answer your questions for these flights, we would like to introduce you to our Ebook: Flights to Thailand - Everything You Need To Know. We present in it the details of flight routes from the United State to Bangkok - the main hub airport of Thailand, and from Bangkok to other attractions of the country. You will find the flight duration, transit time, (estimated) ticket prices, facilities of transit-stops, basic information of business classes of popular airlines, airline rating (based on Cancellation Rate, and On Time Performance Rate, Review of Passengers, and Safety).

We have emailed our customers who have traveled with Exotic Voyages since 2010 to collect recommendations for their preferred airlines. From their reviews, we have compiled the Top 10 Favorite Airlines of Exotic Voyage Customers in terms of shortest duration, most reasonable prices and good services. You can also find in this Ebook useful and practical advice from our luxury customers which will give you a deeper look before making your decision. If you have other questions, feel free to get in touch. We'll be happy to clarify anything.

FLIGHT TO THAILAND: WHAT ARE THE FIRST THINGS YOU NEED TO KNOW?

There are 30 airlines which provide transportation to passengers from the United States to Thailand. Most of them fly into Bangkok's Suvarnabhumi Airport. There are no non-stop flights, but travelers can choose one and (+) two stops in Asia, the Middle East, or Europe. The most popular stops are Seoul, Tokyo, Dubai, Doha, and London. The layover time varies from 1 hour to 4 hours, 5 hours, 8 hours, or even more. A few flights have a 20-hour stopover. These offer a great chance for people who want to discover another city on their journey to do so. On the other hand, they can make the waiting time seem infinite for those who want to start their Thailand trip as soon as possible.

John F. Kennedy International Airport (JFK), Los Angeles International Airport (LAX), Chicago O'Hare International Airport (ORD), Logan International Airport (BOS), and San Francisco International Airport (SFO) are the five airports which have the most flights to Bangkok each day. It is estimated that every day there are around 1,340 flights from JFK and 1,350 flights from LAX to Bangkok. These incredible numbers are persuasive evidence of Thailand's magnetism.

The average flight duration to Bangkok from Los Angeles is about 19 and a half hours. From Chicago or San Francisco, it is about 20 and a half hours, and from New York City, it is about 20 hours. Flight time can fluctuate widely between different airlines and different routes.

Delta, United, and American Airlines are the three major U.S. carriers that handle flights to Bangkok. You can find flights on many international airlines, including Cathay Pacific, KLM, Japan Airlines, Korean Air, ANA, Qatar Airways, Singapore Airlines, EVA Air, China Eastern, Emirates, British Airways, Air France, and more. Middle East airlines (Emirates, Etihad, and Qatar Airways) are supposed to be three of the most popular. 31 main airports in the US offer one-stop flights to Bangkok, while the rest offer 2 stops and more.

AIRPORTS WITH ONE-STOP FLIGHTS

There are currently no direct commercial flights from the United State to Bangkok, but there are 31 international airports in 20 states which have connecting flights with only a single stop. That means you will fly your first leg from one of 31 airports, make a stop at a midpoint airport where you get off the plane to board another one with different flight number (sometimes you have to change airports), then fly the second leg to Thailand.

The table below shows flights from the 31 airports we mentioned above. You will find on it basic information you need to know about flying to Thailand. The data was collected in mid June 2018 for two periods: 100 days in advance and over the Christmas holiday. As you probably realize, these numbers vary depending on your booking time, so just take our prices here as reference. Most of the flights over the Christmas vacation period are about one hour shorter than those during the rest of the year because aviation companies have to increase the flight frequency to meet the enormous demand during that time.

Flights shown on the table below are arranged in time order for your easy research and categorized by main cities. They are the best combination of price and speed. If you want to find your city, just hit the two keys Ctrl and F altogether and type the names of airports you are looking for.

AIRPORT WITH 2+ STOP FLIGHTS

From other airports in the USA, you need to take 2+ stop flights to Thailand. That means instead of one midpoint airport, you now will have two or more. The stops can be all outside the USA, or include domestic airports in the USA. During the transfer time, you will be either connected to other planes or required to change airports.

After many years working with American customers, we know that the transit procedures at foreign airports sometimes require a lot of time. In some countries, you might be asked to have a visa on arrival. That usually extends the flight duration by hours and makes your journey more tiring. Therefore, our recommendation is that you choose the flights which stop first in America, and then another city out of the USA. Don't choose the flight that go through two foreign stops before reaching Thailand.

As with flights from main airports, the main criteria we based this table on is the most convenient flights in terms of price and time, not necessarily the cheapest (with a long time waiting) or the fastest (which cost an arm and leg). They are arranged in time order for your easy research.

FROM BANGKOK TO OTHER DOMESTIC AIRPORTS

Not only the capital city of Thailand, Bangkok is also the cultural hub and shopping center. That's the reason why most of Thailand tours typically start from and end at this city.

There are 11 frequent airlines offering non-stop flights from Suvarnabhumi Airport (BKK) and Don Muang Airport (DMK) to 24 domestic airports such as Chiang Mai, Krabi, Phuket, Samui, and Chiang Rai. If you have a reasonable itinerary, you can fly from these places to other famous destinations without returning to Bangkok. Contact us any time if you need advice for planning an itinerary. It's all for free.

Suvarnabhumi Airport is the twentieth busiest airport in the world and the ninth busiest airport in Asia. It handled 258,619 international and 77,735 domestic aircraft movements with 55,892,428 passengers in 2016, while these numbers for the Don Muang Airport respectively are 77,399, 166,897 and 35,203,757.

Both airports are easy to reach from the center of the city by public transportation or taxi, but Suvarnabhumi Airport is bigger and more modern with world-class services for domestic, international, and connecting flights. On the other hand, Don Muang Airport hosts mostly charter flights and low-cost airlines.

Flight duration from Bangkok to other places doesn't vary much and doesn't take a lot of time. You can fly to Chiang Mai within 1h15m, to Phuket in 1h20m, to Chiang Rai in 1h25m, and to Krabi in 1h20m. The advantage of time and price make flight the most convenient way to travel around the country.

Passengers who have raised worries about the safety condition of Thai domestic flights after the International Civil Aviation Organisation (ICAO) issued the red flag in March 2015 against the country over its safety report will be happy to know that the flag was removed. Currently, nine Thai airlines have been successfully recertificat-ed to the international safety standards of ICAO. These include Thai Airways Interna-tional, Bangkok Airways; Thai AirAsia; Thai AirAsia X; Nok Airlines; Nok Air Company (NokScoot); Thai Smile; Thai Lion; and Sabaidee Airlines (New Gen). But many travelers have reviewed Thai Airways, Bangkok Airways, and Thai Smile as the best and safest airlines.

USEFUL ADVICES FROM OUR CUSTOMERS:

- "Choose the shortest flight you can afford not the cheapest one. After all, your trip is about Thailand. You want the time there, not in the air."
Emma Gilbert (Chicago, IL)
- "Carefully check seat dimension and legroom of the airplanes before book the ticket. Long haul journey need comfy seat."
Sophia Browning (Houston, TX)
- "Once you are in Thailand, choose Thai AirAsia, Bangkok Airways, Thai Smile, and Thai Airways for domestic flights. They are generally regarded as safe and good."
William Smith (San Diego, CA)
- "I have flown to Asia with Korean Airlines several times. Nothing to complain about them. On time performance, excellent service, good food, drink choice and the stop over in Seoul is very pleasant. Great value for money."
Alexa Thompson (Stamford, CT)
- "For a longt haul flight, it would be wise to note the schedules of your airlines. Consider their transit arrival time, transit duration, transit departure time, and transit airports. Personally, I find it very tiring to have to transit in an airport in the early morning when my body clock hasn't been familiar to the new time zone and most of shops in the airport are closed."
Alexa Thompson (Stamford, CT)
- "If you can't afford business class, travel in premium economy. You'll get more space, better food, bigger seat, and a reasonable price between economy and business."
Tara Gill (Tampa, FL)
- "If you travel on your own, go BTS, skytrain, and taxi when you are in Bangkok and choose airplane to visit other destinations. It's inexpensive and with all the road accidents it's definitely safer. For myself, I would prefer to book a tour with agent. More relax and stress-free."
Tiffany Martinsson (Orlando, FL)
- "Some airlines just provide 2+ stop flights on specific days of the week. Cheek carefully before your booking. Pay attention on which have unusual flying time because they might not have any flight on that day. Therefore you have to wait for one night until the next day. That will extend the total time"
Mary Smith (Dayton, OH)

BUSINESS CLASS & PREMIUM ECONOMY CLASS

A normal flight from the United State to Bangkok takes about 20 hours. That is certainly not a short journey for anyone. The whole day is effectively wasted and time seems to last forever. Stops with comfy reclining chairs, boutique lounges, and entertainment won't affect comfort in the air, but a business class flight will be much more comfortable. It will help you have a relaxing flight and a good night's sleep. That means you don't have to waste another day to recover after landing.

If you ever wondered what is the difference between a Business Class versus a Standard Economy flight, here is what a passenger with Business Class can take advantage of:

- Double the seat pitch (legroom)
- At least 2-3 extra inches of seat width
- More degrees of recline
- Electric seat controls to adjust recline position, leg-rest and lumbar support
- Larger personal TV screens and more viewing options
- Laptop Power Ports
- Premium Food and Wine Service
- Increased cabin staff to passenger ratio
- Amenity kits including socks, eye masks, and toiletries

If you can't afford Business Class but still want a comfortable long-haul flight, Premium Economy is another great choice. The fare is generally 65% less expensive than Business Class. In terms of space and amenities, Business Class offer up to 50% more legroom, significantly greater recline, more substantial leg-rests and head-rests, and superior food and wine offerings. But compared to Standard Economy, Premium Economy offers 5-7 inches of extra legroom, 1-2 extra inches of seat width, 2-3 extra inches of seat recline, as well as additional amenities.

TRANSIT STOPS

If you have only a 1-hour layover, it's easy. You can read a book or surf online to kill the time, especially since all airports offer free WiFi for passengers nowadays. But what about 4 hours, 5 hours, and even more? Waiting time can be dull and boring. And considering the long time of your flight (about 22-24 hours sitting on the airplane), you will surely care about the entertainment or facilities at the stop-over airports. Luckily, some airports are really nice hosts. They have massage chairs, shower rooms, gardens, pool, and golf courses to entertain their passengers. More than that, some even provide free city tours which make your layover more valuable and interesting.

The table below offers popular transit stops for the United State - Bangkok routes. You can find detailed information about the facilities as well as entertainment available at each stop.
